Shaped by its location at the junction of the Grand and Nith rivers, Paris continues to gain attention for its multifaceted lifestyle and reasonable commutes to other cities.

Founded at the junction of the Grand and Nith Rivers in 1850, Paris, Ontario is home to many attractions. For more than 150 years, it has been host to the popular Paris Fair, a time-honoured event that began as a small agricultural festival and has now evolved into a renowned Labour Day weekend tradition.

The many eclectic riverside shops and cafés lining the historic downtown draw the attention of those seeking captivating day trips from surrounding areas - as do the scenic 18-km Cambridge to Paris Rail-Trail and the connecting 14-km Paris to Brantford Trail.

Due to its distinctive, heritage cobblestone buildings, Paris is known as the “Cobblestone Capital of Canada.”

And, once you discover the charming community of Grandville and its new single family homes that mirror this unique architectural style, you’ll also want to call "one of the prettiest towns in Southern Ontario" home.

Minutes away from Highway 403, Grandville is an ideal location for commuting to workplaces in Kitchener-Waterloo, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton and the GTA.

“This is a great community for people who prefer the kind of lifestyle that a smaller town or ‘bedroom community’ has to offer. Whether it’s stepping away from the hustle and bustle of a larger city or simply getting more home and backyard for your money, you’ll find exactly what you’re looking for in Paris,” explains Kristie Pecora, Sales Manager at Activa, the forward-thinking developer that has brought Grandville to life.

In addition to its peaceful, storybook setting, Grandville has many key amenities, such as two elementary schools right in the centre of this growing community. The Sacred Heart Catholic School and Cobblestone Elementary School both offer childcare facilities on-site and are within walking distance of most homes.

The playgrounds, parks, walking trails and sidewalks are complete and, to the delight of coffee drinkers, the neighbourhood retail plaza has a Tim Hortons (which also serves as an unofficial community centre).

Grandville’s close proximity to the Nith and Grand Rivers also affords numerous possibilities for hiking, biking, fishing, kayaking, canoeing and more.

Of course, an obvious focal point is the exciting selection of signature series bungalows and single detached homes on 49' and 50' lots from Kitchener-Waterloo based builder, Eastforest Homes.

Each home from Eastforest Homes in Grandville is distinguished by an eye-catching main floor brick exterior. This month you may also choose a landscaping package in addition to $15,000 in FREE Upgrades.

Paris is known as the "Cobblestone Capital of Canada" because of its distinctive heritage cobblestone buildings and streetscapes.
